Account of the Battle.

The report of the great Battle of Stones River, in to-day's paper, taken from the Cincinnati Commercial, was written by a gentleman in the army, who had unusual opportunities for observing, and reporting correctly the events which be records.

INTERESTING REBEL LETTERS.

Despondency of the People - What A Rebel Thinks of the Twenty Regro Exemption Law.

We are indebted to a friend for two rebel letters captured at Muriceesboro. They are both from Tippah county, Mississippi, one to a friend, and the other to a son in the rebel army. From the first addressed by Samuel Aonen to Mr. JAMES F. CRAIC, a private in Company B, 32d Regiment Mississippi Volunteers, and dated Dec. 8th, we make the follow-

"Things are evidently going against us here. The tide of misfortunes commencing with the unsuccessful attack on Corinth, has not turned yet."

He then enumerates their successive refreats, and says that they are discoursging the people. He speaks of the large number of slaves who are continually escaping from his neighborhood to the Yankee lines; and mentions a plot for an extensive stampede which was "nipped in the bud." A white man named Coss was the leader of the fugitives, and he had been arrested, and was to be hung in a few days. Affairs seem to be in a turbulant state, in Tippah county, as regards the black chattels, and poor AGNEN writes very much like a fellow who had in this country, have given him a wide a large sized wolf by the ears, terribly celebrity in the North, and his position perplexed whether to hold on, and be swallowed up, or let go, and try his luck Confederacy insured him a ready hear-

The other letter is from Mr. W. A. Davis to his son, also in the army, dated December 10th. He writes:

"I do not know that it is proper but will venture any how to give you my views as to the present prospects for the suc cess of the South, and in a word, they certainly the Congress. The course they pursue, or vention of the Democratic party, to which rather the laws they pass, I think well be was a delegate. The candidate nomly under such trying circumstances as these. The acts of Congress that I particularly object to is the sending a man home because he has twenty negroes, instead of pressing him, negroes and all, into the service, and then the refusal to raise the wages of privates and non-commissioned offirose so much that even lifteen dollars per month would not buy half as much And many other things too tedious to mention.
